Vul'·pew·lin: of or relating to a fox-like creature grown entirely out of hop vines. Hop farmers of the Pacific Northwest have reported sightings of an ethereal creature romping around their hop yards under the full moon. The Vulpes Lupulus has been described as a creature made from the vines themselves, causing the plants to wave and dance in the moonlight even when no breeze is present. Nonbelievers say it's nothing more than a common fox out on his nightly hunt. While no hard evidence has been documented, Sly Fox happens to believe in these wild tales. This beer embodies the spirit of this mischievous hop farm dweller. Bursting with Citra, Mosaic, Centennial and Cascade, Vulpulin IPA grabs your senses and takes you on a midnight frolic through the hops yards.
